

The world is ending, at least as everyone knows it. With the Resonance Virus running rampant among the population and having developed an immunity to earlier cures, an assortment of the elite and those who happened to be near them at the time have been herded into bunkers across the nation. At one such bunker, scientists who were involved in the Resonance Project have been working around the clock on a new cure. As the hospital ward in the underground bunker is sealed, all anyone can pray for is that they will be among those who survive this apocalypse.

How could it have come to this? Project Resonance was supposed to help the children, not give them the capacity to break out of a laboratory and spread a virus fatal to the majority of the population of the planet. The attempt to quarantine the children failed, and with the spread of the virus the level of destruction is reaching cataclysmic proportions. And you had thrown your support around this project every step of the way. Had you ignored some sign of what was to come because of how desperate you were for a cure for Nathan? You hadn't really cared about a weapon; all you wanted was a treatment for your son, a hope for him that someday he'd be able to think and live just like everybody else. You knew when you heard them call it an "empathy virus," as if that was what the children lacked, you should have known something was wrong. In trying to save Nathan, you have encouraged the destruction of the entire world.

One thought remains in your mind, though... you had purposefully kept Nathan out of the trials in case they proved unsafe, but now he is vulnerable to exposure just like anyone else. Nathan has Braiden's Syndrome, though, just as any of the escaped children used to be. If the virus should reach him and infect him... what will it do to your little boy?